Mystery Night

Basic Overview:

What is going to happen next week? Well...that's a mystery. Use this flyer to let the kids know that a fun night will be happening the following week, but that you can't tell them what is happening because it is a mystery. Mystery Night is not actually a spy or mystery theme night (please see our Sneaky Sleuth Night for that), it is really just a cover used to make the kids more excited and somewhat disguise what will actually be occurring the following week. There are a couple of things that you can do with this flyer:

Option #1 - You can use this flyer if by chance you are undecided between a couple of fun nights. Giving out a mystery night flyer gives you a bit more time to plan and prepare for your fun night all the while building excitement for the kids. If you are choosing to do this, obviously the fun nights you are deciding between cannot be ones that require the children to bring things in or dress up. If you decided on Wacky Tie Night for instance, no one will be prepared with a tie for this night and it will flop. It would be best to do something that does not require the kids to bring anything with them such as the Game Show Extravaganza Night, That's the Ticket Night, Spotted Fever Night, Treasure Chest Quest Night, On the Spot Night, Caller ID Night, Cheese-it Night, Silent Night, Back Track Blitz Night, or one of the "End of the Year Event" Nights.

Option #2 - You can use this flyer just to add an additional element of surprise especially if the fun nights seem to be becoming routine (if this is the case, we'd also suggest perhaps changing up the fun nights that you are doing, doing fun nights less frequently, or offering more exciting prizes for participation). Again, as in option #1 above, obviously the fun night you are planning to do cannot be one that requires the children to bring things in or dress up unless you give them a hint as to what to expect.

It is best to be pretty vague with any hints that you give to the kids. For instance you may say something like "the only hint I can give you about next week is you may want to come ready to complete a bunch of pages from your books." Though they do not know what it is, plan and prepare carefully so in future they will know that this is not a night that they want to miss.
